Memorandum on the Rainfall of June & July and the Probable Amount during August & September 1964

New Delhi, the 11th August 1964

1. Weather in India during June & July

June—The monsoon which had advanced into the extreme southeast Bay of Bengal and south Bay Islands up to about Lat. 10°N by the end of the first week of May, in association with a cyclonic storm, advanced further northwards up to about Lat. 15°N by the end of that month. The Arabian Sea Branch of the monsoon advanced slowly and set in over south Kerala on 5th June, about five days later than the normal date. A trough of low pressure which appeared over the east central Arabian Sea off the Kanara coast moved in a northerly direction and progressively intensified into a severe cyclonic storm of small extent with a core of hurricane winds by 11th. Crossing the coast near Naliya on 12th, it rapidly weakened and broke up over the Western Himalayas by 14th. Under its influence, the monsoon rapidly advanced northwards and set in over the entire west coast by 12th. Heavy rains also occurred in Gujarat State, Rajasthan and the Punjab (I). According to press reports tidal waves as high as 15 feet and winds of gale force associated with the severe cyclonic storm caused large scale destruction of public property and life in Saurashtra and Kutch and along the Kathiawar coast.

There was considerable thundershower activity over Assam during the first week causing all the rivers there to rise in spate. The monsoon advanced into lower Assam on 11th and steadily extended into the remaining parts of northeast India by 15th. As a result of this, heavy rains continued to occur in Assam during the second week. The monsoon activity was fairly good and sustained over northeast India during the second half of the month. According to press reports, the Brahmaputra rose above danger level at many places in Assam during the third week causing damage to standing paddy and jute crops over vast areas. The Torsa and Teesta in north Bengal were also reported to be in high floods during the last week.

A low pressure area formed over the north west Bay of Bengal on 18th and moving inland on 20th persisted over northeast Madhya Pradesh and adjoining east Uttar Pradesh from 21st to 25th. Under its influence, the monsoon extended into east Uttar Pradesh, Gujarat State and most parts of Madhya Pradesh by 25th. Another low pressure area which developed over north Orissa and adjoining Gangetic West Bengal on 29th and lay over Bihar Plateau on 30th caused active monsoon conditions over the central parts of the country, Orissa and Bihar State towards the end of the month.

After the initial spell of heavy rains which occurred at the time of the setting in of the monsoon over the west coast, the monsoon activity there remained weak to moderate. However, the activity increased appreciably over the Konkan and coastal Mysore during the second fortnight in association with the movement of the two low pressure areas mentioned in the previous paragraph. The other parts of the Peninsula also received a few spells of the showers particularly during the last week.

Two feeble western disturbances moving eastwards across the Western Himalayas caused a few dust or thunderstorms over many parts of northwest India during the first week of June. Later a spell of good rains occurred there in association with the severe cyclonic storm from the Arabian Sea which moved as a low towards the western Himalayas after crossing the coast. The rainfall was particularly heavy in Jammu and Kashmir and according to press reports, the water level in the Jhelum near Srinagar rose and the Jammu-Srinagar road was breached at many places disrupting traffic. Mainly dry weather prevailed over northwest India during the second fortnight. During the last week of June the Western Himalayas experienced some rainfall due to the advancing monsoon current in the low levels.

The month's rainfall was in large excess in Saurashtra and Kutch, in moderate excess in east Madhya Pradesh and Payalaseema and in slight excess in the Bay Islands, Assam, Sub-Himalayan West Bengal, West Madhya Pradesh, the Konkan, Vidarbha and South Interior Mysore. It was normal in Bihar Plateau, Jammu and Kashmir, Madhya Maharashtra, Coastal Andhra Pradesh and the Arabian Sea Islands. It was in slight defect in Himachal Pradesh, Rajasthan, Gujarat Region, Telangana and coastal and north interior Mysore, in moderate defect in Gangetic West Bengal, Orissa, Bihar, Plains, east Uttar Pradesh, the Madras State and Kerala and in large defect in west Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I), and Marathwada.

July—The low pressure area which lay over Bihar Plateau and neighbourhood on the last day of the previous month moved westwards to Rajasthan and merged into the seasonal low by 3rd. Another low pressure area that formed over the head Bay of Bengal on 2nd intensified into a depression by the next day and crossing coast on 4th, weakened over west Uttar Pradesh by 7th. Under their influence, the monsoon extended further northwestwards to cover the entire country by 5th. The monsoon activity was well maintained over most parts of the country during the first week, being strong over the central belt of the country from Orissa to Gujarat State and also over the Konkan and Kerala. Sambalpur recorded an exceptionally heavy fall of 31 cm of rain on 5th.

During the period from 8th to 18th the axis of the monsoon trough lay close to the foot of the Himalayas on most of the days and as a result of this the monsoon activity was more marked over north India with heavy to very heavy rains occurring at a number of places in the Himalayas and adjoining plains. The flood waters of the rivers in Assam, north Bihar and the Punjab (I) were reported to have inundated low lying areas and damaged standing crops. The monsoon was weak to moderate over the remaining parts of the country during the above period.

In association with the movement of a low pressure area from Orissa to South Rajasthan during the period 20th—22nd, the monsoon activity increased over the central parts of the country, Gujarat State and over the Peninsula outside the west coast. According to press reports the flood waters of the Morna river inundated low lying areas in Akola district and washed away standing crops over an area of about 5,000 acres. Another low pressure area which formed over Vidarbha on 24th moved northwestwards to the Punjab (I) where it became unimportant by 30th. Under its influence the monsoon activity was maintained over the country except along the west coast where it was weak during the last week.

An unusual spell of good rains occurred in the Madras State and Andhra Pradesh during the last week, in association with the development of a well marked trough of low pressure in the south Bay of Bengal on 23rd, which moved into the extreme south Peninsula on 29th and weakened thereafter. The monsoon also began to revive its activity along the west coast towards the end of the month.

The rainfall during the month was in large excess in Sub Himalayan West Bengal, Bihar Plains, West Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I), West Rajasthan, Rayalaseema, the Madras State, South Interior Mysore and the Arabian Sea Islands and in moderate excess in Jammu and Kashmir, Gujarat Region and north Interior Mysore and in slight excess in, Assam, Gangetic West Bengal, Orissa, east Uttar Pradesh, Marathwada and Kerala. It was normal over the Bay Islands, east Madhya Pradesh, Saurashtra and Kutch, Madhya Maharashtra and coastal Andhra Pradesh. It was in slight defect in Bihar Plateau, east Rajasthan, west Madhya Pradesh, the Konkan, Telangana and coastal Mysore and in moderate defect in Himachal Pradesh and Vidarbha.

June & July—The monsoon set in over south Kerala on 5th June, about five days later than the normal date and advanced rapidly to cover the entire country by 5th July. There was fairly good activity of the monsoon in the Peninsula and northeast India in June, with heavy rains in Assam leading to floods particularly during the first and third weeks. There was a general strengthening of the monsoon during the last week of June which continued during the first week of July. During this period the central belt of the country from Orissa to Gujarat State received good rainfall, floods being reported in Akola district in the first week of July. During the period 8th to 18th July, the monsoon activity was more marked over north India with heavy to very heavy rains in the Himalayas leading to floods in the rivers in Assam, north Bihar and the Punjab (I) in the middle of the month. There was sustained monsoon activity along west coast during the second fortnight of June and the first week of July. Rainfall activity was pronounced over the rest of the Peninsula during the second half of July with an unusual spell in the Madras State and Andhra Pradesh during the last week.

The rainfall during the months of June and July was in large excess in the Punjab (I), Rayalaseema and the Madras State, in moderate excess in Sub-Himalayan West Bengal, West Uttar Pradesh, West Rajasthan and in South Interior Mysore and in slight excess in Assam, Bihar Plains, Jammu and Kashmir, Gujarat State, north Interior Mysore and the Arabian Sea Islands. It was normally in the Bay Islands, Gangetic West Bengal, Orissa, Bihar Plateau, east Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, the Konkan, Madhya Maharashtra and coastal Andhra Pradesh. It was in slight defect in east Rajasthan, Marathwada, Vidarbha, Telangana, coastal Mysore and Kerala and in moderate defect in Himachal Pradesh.

The following Table gives for each sub-division the total rainfall during the period its departure from normal and the percentage departure from normal —

2. Conditions having influence on the rains of August and September 1964.

A foreshadowing of the monsoon rainfall of June to September was issued early in June. Recent data have been examined to see if any useful supplementary foreshadowing for the remainder of the season can now be given. The relevant data are the following :—

Indian Pressure in July—In July pressure was below normal in south Peninsula above normal in east Madhya Pradesh, Orissa and Coastal West Bengal and nearly normal over the rest of the country.

Indian Ocean Pressure in July—At Mauritius, pressure was in excess of normal by 0.8 mb.

Java Rain—The monthly rainfall departures from October 1963 to February 1964 were -75%, -55%, -11%, -45% and -23% respectively.

South Rhodesia Rain—Rainfall from October 1963 to April, 1964 was in defect by 231.4 mm.

South American Pressure—Pressure departures were as follows :—

	Buenos Aires	Cordoba	Santiago
June 1964	+0.68 mb.	+0.5 mb.	+0.9 mb.
July 1964	+1.3 mb.	+1.1 mb.	+0.7 mb.

Punjab Temperature Range—Departure of the Punjab Temperature Range \pm (April+May) 1964 was $+0.6^{\circ}\text{C}$.

Indo-Gangetic River Discharges—Mean departure of the total river discharges during April and May 1964 was in defect by 75 (10,000 cusecs).

3. Inferences from the Data.

In foreshadowing the August and September rainfall in the Peninsula [taken to consist of Maharashtra, Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, Interior Mysore North, Telangana and coastal Mysore (excluding South Kanara)], the chief factors in the order of decreasing reliability as judged from the available data are Mauritius Pressure, Java Rain, South Rhodesia Rain and Indian Pressure. Of the factors, Indian pressure and Java Rain were very favourable, South Rhodesia rain indifferent and Mauritius pressure very unfavourable. The statistical analysis indicates that there is a four to one chance that the total rainfall of August and September 1964 in the Peninsula will lie above 103% of the normal.

For Northwest India (taken to consist of the Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I), Himachal Pradesh, Delhi and Rajasthan), the factors used in the order of decreasing reliability, as judged by the available data are Indo-Gangetic river discharges, Indian Pressure, Punjab temperature range, South Rhodesia Rain and South American Pressure. This year South American Pressure and South Rhodesia Rain both are very favourable, Indo-Gangetic river discharges favourable, Indian pressure slightly favourable and Punjab temperature range unfavourable. The statistical analysis indicates that there is a four to one chance that the total rainfall of August and September, 1964 in Northwest India will lie above 97% of the normal.

4. Summary.

The total rainfall during August and September, 1964 is likely to be normal both in Peninsula and Northwest India.
